

FAA Excellence in Aviation Research Award Call for Nominations

The FAA is now accepting nominations for its 13th annual Excellence in Aviation Research Award. Through this award, the FAA acknowledges the valuable contributions of its external research partners and formally recognizes significant aviation research accomplishments. Conferring this special distinction allows the government to recognize superior research efforts and bring their benefits to public attention.

The Excellence in Aviation Research designation is a highly competitive, non-monetary award that is presented each year to worthy individuals or institutions conducting research that enhances airport and aircraft safety, improves capacity, and/or contributes to the development of the Next Generation Air Transportation System. Nominees must be able to show significant impact and benefit of extended aviation research efforts and application of improvements within the aviation industry.

Nominations and supporting documentation for the 2009 Excellence in Aviation Research Award will be accepted through September 15, 2009.

For additional information on the award or to obtain a nomination package, please contact, Pamela Crenshaw at pam.crenshaw@faa.gov

Submission

Deadline: September 15, 2009